Trump Leading in Polls

by Mike Gamgee

The latest results are in, and it comes as a surprise to no one that GOP front runner Donald Trump is leading the pack. A strong contender since he began his race last fall, Trump has edged out his rivals at every turn. His platform of strict morals, and old fashioned American values has touched a chord with many, his words have inspired crowds of hundreds of thousands to attend the rallies he has been holding across the country.

What though is so desirable about this candidate. Registered voter Michael Wallace had this to say about Trump "I think that he [Trump] is a great asset to our nation. We need to get back to the basics, back to what made America great. We need to get jobs back to American hands, and I think that Trump is the Man to do it." Not all would agree with Mr. Wallace and many of Trumps Democratic rivals do not share his optimism. "Really are you serious? Donald Trump?" Says Bridget Sands of Nashua. "What can he possibly do? Didn't he run several of his own companies into bankruptcy? How does that help [America]?" Sands appears to be in the minority, and if fundraising is any indicator then Donald Trump is the candidate to beat. Not only is he using a sizable portion of his own finances to fund his campaign, the Queen City Voice has recently heard that several anonymous donors have donated over $3 million to his campaign. Who these donors are is a mystery, but one thing is clear, people love Donald Trump.

How Diversity Makes Us Better

by Eric Reed

America is often called a melting pot, a blend of multiple cultures all mixed together forming a cohesive whole. These cultures come from far and wide, from the mountains of eastern Europe to the deserts of the Middle East. Manchester could be seen as a microcosm of the nation as a whole. Its people come from many countries, and many walks of life.

Despite rising concerns over refugees Manchester has seen a rise in emigration. Many of these peoples come from Middle Eastern countries particularly Egypt and northeastern Iran. They have come to America seeking freedoms not available in their homelands and Manchester has offered shelter to many.

Some worry that these immigrants will bring their troubles with them, while others think that the additional diversity will make for a greater America, as their cultural differences will create a better understanding of those who come from very different walks of life.

It cannot be said that Manchester is not a welcoming place and even Mayor

Gatsis had this to say on the subject. "When it comes down to it, we are all immigrants. We as Americans come from all walks of life, and coming to America seeking freedom is something our forefathers considered the cornerstone of our great nation. Who are we to judge?"

Homeless in Manchester

by Jennifer Ryan

As winter settles in our thoughts again turn to those without the warmth of shelter, those who inhabit our cities streets, homeless and alone. Thankfully these last few years have seen a significant decrease in the homeless population. Whether this is due to state programs, or the homeless seeking different cities is unclear. What is clear though is that Manchester has never been a better place, and fewer of its citizens are trapped out in the cold.

DEAR SANDY

DEAR SANDY- Recently I joined a very exclusive club. It has many amazing perks for membership and although the price was very high, I am proud to be a member. I would like my best friend to join, but unfortunately those run the organization say I am not allowed to invite him into the fold. We have been bros our whole life, and I really want him to be able to take part. What should I do?

-Friendless in Manchester

DEAR FRIENDLESS- If you can't invite him there is probably a good reason, and I wouldn't advise breaking your club's rules. Perhaps there is something else you can do together to make up for it? Perhaps some time skiing on one of our fantastic mountains? Or some of the activities you both did before you joined the club? Just because you joined a club doesn't mean your friendship has to end.
