Bernie Sanders Sex Scandal

by Jennifer Ryan

This weekend several text messages were made public that link Senator and presidential hopeful, Bernie Sanders to what has turned into a scandal that will deeply impact the senator's bid for office. The texts in question were shared with the media and show Sanders engaging in behavior that brings into question his morals, as he is shown engaging in a practice known as "sexting" with multiple young women all shown to be members of his campaign office.

Sanders is certainly not the first politician to engage in these sorts of activities, but it is the first time the esteemed senator has been witnessed engaging in such. This comes as a critical blow as his chief rival Donald Trump pushes past him in the polls. Trump will likely continue to grow in popularity in the aftermath of these revelations. The Queen City Voice approached Senator Sanders for a comment but we were pushed away and told that Sanders has no intention of responding to such low brow tactics from his competitors.

Home Invasion Victim Hospitalized.

by Eric Reed

The Victim of last week's home invasion has been released into the care of The Cypress Center, a short term mental health facility located on Cypress st. The Victim whose name has been released, One Jacob Morgan, has been sent to the center to receive a psychological evaluation as well as grief counseling.

Morgan had already been diagnosed with PTSD prior to the attack on his family, a condition he acquired during two tours in Afghanistan with the US Special Forces. With luck and treatment he will be able to move past the tragedy he has suffered.

Rat Population at All Time High

by John Philips

Rats are not a new problem for civilized society. As long as mankind has built cities rats have been there with us, in the shadows feeding off of all we leave behind. Manchester is no different, and the Queen City has seen its share of rat problems over the years. According to local animal control officers the problem has never been as bad "I seen em, they're everywhere is seems, big as beavers and twice as mean," Report's Matt Barnes who regularly checks on the rat populations. "I put poison down, but they don't seem to eat it, too smart for it I think. It's almost like they know."

It's not just pest control that has taken note of the rat problem. "I went to take out some trash, and there is was, a huge rat, thought it was a dog at first it was so big. Mean too, damned thing hissed at me when I tried to scare it off," Nick Sholtz, who works at Raxx Billiards. Animal Control assures us that there is no danger, and that the winter will likely kill off a large portion of the rat population, despite that they are putting down traps in record numbers, in efforts to limit the rat population.

New Church Opens Doors to Public

by Mike Gamgee

A new church has opened its doors today. The "Church of Eternal Light" caters to those seeking an alternative to conventional religious pursuits and offers classes on meditation, reiki, and other new age activities. The classes are taught by Thomas Amal a spiritualist and former member of the Modern Mystery School. The classes are free, but suggested donations start at five dollars. All are welcome to attend.

DEAR SANDY

DEAR SANDY- Our Grandson Jeff wishes to study abroad next year. He is Currently a senior in high school and wishes to travel to Europe next year to study, as well as work on his skills in foreign languages. The family is mostly okay with his education pursuits, but we're a bit concerned about funding his trip. It seems he has acquired the money to travel, but cannot tell us how he has acquired the funds. Should we be concerned? - Concerned about money.

DEAR CONCERNED- You are right to be worried. Travelling is an expensive endeavor and if your grandson cannot tell you how he got the money, I would perhaps discourage him from making the trip. Honesty is very important, and is he cannot be honest about this he may be lying to you about other things as well.

ODD NEWS

NEW YORK (AP) — A cow that was captured by police after fleeing from a New York City slaughterhouse has been taken in by an animal sanctuary and renamed for rock legend Freddie Mercury.

Online video showed the brown and white cow trotting past shops and restaurants on Thursday afternoon.

The founder of the Skylands Animal Sanctuary in Wantage (WAHNT'-ihj), New Jersey, Mike Stura, picked up the cow Friday morning in New York and says he's named the creature after the late lead singer of the band Queen.

The cow was scheduled to be killed on Friday. Instead, Freddie rode through rush-hour traffic in a trailer, then visited a vet, before arriving at a farm.

Stura says Freddie will enjoy "a life of leisure," being cared for alongside "cow friends."
